Every pet owner wants their pet to be healthy, and part of this aim is ensuring a proper diet. Pets need many of the same nutrients as humans do, and yet their food is often overlooked; private-label food manufacturers are now filling this gap with pet-focused, quality-made pet foods. These private-label pet food manufacturers create pet food products for customers to sell under their brands, and they have taken the pet food world by storm by providing gourmet pet foods for our furry friends. This article will explore some of the top featured private label manufacturers and suppliers of pet food on Thomas, as well as the top suppliers in the US & Canada by revenue.

What is Private Label Pet Food Manufacturers?

Private-label pet food manufacturers provide pet food products to customers with their own private brand names. Not only does this help remove the logistics of setting up an in-house manufacturing plant, but it also allows customers to find a manufacturer with the exact tools and practices to make their dream pet food. These private-label pet food companies are wildly popular among pet owners, as they are a more targeted and sustainable source for their pet's needs. Some companies provide pre-formulated options, while others create custom blends for customers based on their exact specifications.

The private label market is heavily segmented due to the hundreds of companies producing private label products for customers. Also, private-label vitamins and supplement suppliers can easily shift into making pet food, as much of the same equipment, procedures, and certifications are needed for both. This means that, when you are looking for private-label pet food manufacturers, understand that they may be smaller companies with less market share, and they might not exclusively focus on pet foods. However, there are dedicated manufacturers that solely produce pet foods, providing customer-based recipes and formulas to provide the best private-label product possible.
